16 VICTIMS OF OHIO'S HEAT WAVE
FIVE INJURED IN AUTO CRASHWALLACE SON IS SERIOUSLY HURT SUNDAY

Three Other Members of Family and Evelyn Wolf Also Cut and Bruised.

Earl Wallace, three year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Wallace, suffered a concussion of the skull and three other children, Carl, Paul and Marvene, were cut and bruised, along with Evelyn Wolf, granddaughter of Homer Wolf, in an auto collision on the Island Road, Sunday morning.

The accident occurred near the "Kettle Hole," just above the gravel crusher at the turn of the road.

Carl Wallace was driving his father's machine and was coming into the city. Near the turn in the road he noticed another machine coming towards him on the wrong side of the road. He blew his horn, but the car, which was being driven by Grant Swearingen, did not change its course. Seeing that a collision was inevitable Carl tried to avoid it by turning out.

As he did so his car was struck by that of Mr. Swearingen.

The radiators of both cars were damaged considerably but both remained on the road and on their wheels. Nearby at the side of the road the old "kettle hole" yawns, and had either car gone into it, a tragedy might have been enacted.

Paul Wallace received a cut over his right eye, which took four stitches to close. Marvene received a slight bruise on her forehead as did also Evelyn Wolf.

Earl Wallace, the three-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. W. Wallace, suffered a concussion of the skull and his condition is serious.

Carl Wallace, the driver, escaped with slight bruises. Dr. Jackson attended the injured.

The Wallace car was brought in by the wrecker of the Circleville Motors Co. The Swearingen Franklin car was brought in by the Schlar Garage wrecker.

Mr. Swearingen after the accident stopped incoming autos and had them take the injured to their home in this city.

Home Is Sought For Bright Boy In Pickaway Co.

Would you like to have a cute little youngster, with blue eyes and just 16 months' old, in your home?

Well, by inquiring at the home of Mrs. C. A. Patton, probation officer, 216 W. Mound-st., within the next two days, you can have the child.

He's a boy and answers to the name of Harry. The child's mother is unable to care for him and wants a nice home somewhere in Pickaway-co. if possible, for him.

Give Mrs. Patton a ring on the 'phone and look the boy over.

FAMILY REUNION HELD AT DELAWARE

The Holter-Penn family reunion was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Grimes, in Delaware, Sunday.

Thirty-six members of the family were present from Wooster, New Concord, Columbus, New Holland and Batavia.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Holter May and daughters Misses Catharine and Elizabeth, of this city, Dr. and Mrs. J. B. May, Mr. and Mrs. Percy May of New Holland, were attended.

MORATICO, Va., July 9.—Barney Drury Wessels, 3, was drowned in the Rappahannock river when he fell from a wharf in front of his home.

IT'S UP TO THE CITY

(An Editorial.)

It's up to the City of Circleville now! That is, if the City of Circleville wants to see that the people it has pledged itself to represent, are given a lower water rate, one which they are justly entitled to have.

"The commission's docket is such that an appeal by the City of Circleville could be given almost immediate attention," James Huffman, one of the members of the Ohio Utilities Commission told the representative of The Circleville Herald at Columbus the other day, in stating that the commission was ready AT ONCE to take up the matter of lowering the city's water rates if a re-hearing was demanded.

Now, it's up to the city. For five years water consumers have paid thousands of dollars out of their pockets.

When there is sense in delay, the people are entitled to know at least the reason for it.

There is no reason in the world why City Council cannot hold a special meeting within a very short time to decide definitely what is to be done about the water rates. The city five years ago made one costly error when it failed to pass an ordinance regulating the water rates in Circleville. For five years the water consumers of this city have been paying one of the highest rates in Ohio as a result.

Now, how much longer?

Here is The Circleville Herald's plan after a conference with members of the Ohio Utilities Commission, for action:

First, call in company officials for a conference, let them present their books, and let Council pass an ordinance immediately then setting forth what it, Council, deems is a fair rate.

Second, if the Ohio Water Service company doesn't think this rate set by the city is fair, it can always appeal to the Ohio Utilities Commission.

The road is open for easy action. The Ohio Utilities comes out openly with a statement it is ready to act but that "it is up to the City of Circleville."

What is the City of Circleville going to do about it—or rather WHEN IS IT GOING TO DO IT?

FIND FOREIGNER
PADDLING OVER
LAKE ON "LOGS"

Lone Sailor Said He Was Going To Seacoast On Raft With No Food.

LORAIN, O., July 9.—Immigration officials today questioned Edmund Lutz, who was arrested Sunday on a log raft four miles off Vermilion in Lake Erie.

Coast guards under Capt. Hans Sauder found the lone sailor vigorously paddling eastward on a craft made of logs, telephone poles and a few frail cross pieces. He told that he was nearly broke, and was paddling his way from Detroit to the seacoast. He said he had been in the Russian navy and that his home was Riga, Lithuania.

His raft had no food aboard but did contain a small pail of drinking water.

Lutz was turned over to Marshal Herman Ball of Vermilion and taken to the Lorain-co. jail to await immigration officers from Cleveland.

STEBENVILLE, July 9.—Clarence Beadnell, 29, of Irontide, O., was held by police today, charged with attacking a nine-year-old girl. The charge was filed by M. H. Householder, who said Beadnell attempted an assault upon his granddaughter, Sarah Alice Smith.

STAGE STAR DIES

LOS ANGELES, July 9.—Joseph J. Dowling, 80, for more than 20 years a troupier and stage star, died at his home here yesterday after an illness of two years.

Dowling appeared in hundreds of pictures. Among the outstanding ones was "The Miracle Man," in which he played the title role. The widow and a son, Joseph J. Dowling Jr., Mount Clemens, Mich., survive.

Grocery Manager
Taken Suddenly
Ill, Recovering

Thomas Willis of Wellston, manager of the N. High-st branch of the A. & P. store, Columbus, while enroute from his home in Wellston to Columbus Sunday evening, was taken suddenly ill a few moments after he boarded the traction car at Chillicothe. He had just taken leave of his family driving from his home to Chillicothe, in an auto Sunday evening.

The conductor of the train phoned Dr. Courtwright, the company physician, and the latter met the car on its arrival in this city at 7:10 p. m.

The sick man was carried from the car to a room in the American hotel, where he was given a hypodermic.

The man was suffering from heart trouble.

He is reported as much better this morning after a good night's rest. His family came after him today and took him home.

"Oh But It Looks Good To Me"

The right little, tight little isle of Manhattan looked mighty homelike to three distinguished visitors from abroad, Wilmer Stultz (left), Miss Amelia Earhart and Lou Gordon, as they crowded the rail of the reception yacht Macom on the trip up the bay. The first girl to fly the Atlantic sighed happily, "Oh, but it's good to be home."

SHERIFF PROBES
CRASH IN WHICH
ONE IS INJURED

John Bevins, Residence Unknown, Seriously Injured Near Williamsport.

In a head-on collision on the Zanesville-Cincinnati turnpike, Sunday afternoon, John Bevins, residence unknown, received a fractured skull and was removed to Mercy hospital, Columbus, in C. E. Hill's ambulance.

The accident happened two miles west of Williamsport, near Dewey Dick's home. Mr. Bevins was coming east and had driven thru New Holland but his destination was unknown.

Samuel Smith of Kenton, was the driver of the other car. Mr. Smith, it was said, could not avoid the car of Mr. Bevins, who ran right into him. Both cars are total wrecks. Mr. Smith escaped uninjured.

Sheriff Davis and deputy Carl Porter went to the scene of the wreck and investigated. Sheriff Davis accompanied the injured man and Mr. Hill to the hospital but his condition was such that the sheriff was unable to secure much information.

WHILE SCORES
ARE INJURED
IN ACCIDENTS

Seven Persons Drowned and Six Die From Heat Prostrations In State.

Ohio's first severe heat wave of the year resulted in a toll of at least 16 dead and scores injured over the week-end, a survey the United Press today revealed. Seven persons were drowned, six died from heat prostration and three were killed in automobile accidents.

Thousands of persons jammed the beaches, seeking relief, while other thousands drove to the country, causing so much congestion that a score of accidents resulted.

The toll was recorded as follows:

Cleveland—Two drowned, two dead from heat.

Crestline—One drowned.

Cincinnati—One drowned.

Fort Jefferson—One drowned.

Youngstown—One drowned, one dead from heat.

Marietta—One drowned.

Akron—Two dead from heat.

Moxahala—One dead from heat.

Norwalk—One killed in auto crash.

NEW YORK, July 9.—The first oppressive heat wave of the year lay like a steaming blanket over the eastern coast of the United States today.

The weather bureau predicted that the temperature which reached a seasonal high of 91 degrees in New York Sunday would be reduced by thundershowers.

Meanwhile the city sweltered. Heat rolled up from sticky pavements with baking intensity added to the suffering of between two and three million New Yorkers who had been burned by the sun during Sunday outings.

Morgues held the bodies of persons who had met death in the metropolitan area Sunday while seeking relief from the sun's rays. Three died of heat prostration and 12 by drowning.

CLEVELAND, O., July 9.—The most intense heat wave of the year gripped Ohio over the week end, leaving a toll of sixteen dead.

Seven of the victims were drowned and six died from the heat and three were killed in automobile accidents. Thousands upon thousands of automobiles jammed the highways, making movement of traffic precarious, and beaches throughout the state were taxed to capacity by thousands seeking relief from the heat.

The victims included Max Baer, 67, Pittsburgh salesman, who died from the heat while enroute from Canton to Akron by bus, and H. H. White, 33, of Rockford, Ill., who was killed in an automobile accident near Norwalk.

CIRCLEVILLE GETS RELIEF FROM HEAT

Circleville got some relief from a torrid week-end Monday at 1:15 p. m., when a heavy rain fell.

The rain was a regular cloud-burst and gutters were soon filled with pouring torrents of water.

No heat prostrations were reported here although the thermometer soared Sunday.

SUIT FOR DIVORCE
 Bertha A. Turner has filed a suit for divorce in common pleas court from her husband, Oscar C. Turner, thru her attorney, Thomas A. Renick. The couple were married April 17, 1905, and are the parents of a son and daughter, and also an adopted daughter. She charges her husband with extreme cruelty and gross neglect. The petitioner says that her husband is the owner of a car, some real estate and has a deposit of money in the Third National bank of this city. She asks the court for a restraining order against his disposing of any of his property, his car or the money he has on deposit in the bank. A temporary restraining order was allowed.

SUIT FOR MONEY
 The suit of Thomas W. Scott against J. M. Bernhart and the C. & O. R. R. for labor, is being heard in common pleas court. The plaintiff claims that the defendant owes him some $1,300 for services rendered. Adkins & Adkins represent the plaintiff, and Charles Gerhardt the defendant.

BUT HE WILL MAKE TRIP TO BIG OLYMPICS

And Then If Adverse Ruling Is Made Substitute Will Run For Him.

NEW YORK, July 9.—Investigation of Charley Paddock's amateur status was under way today by the Amateur Athletic Union and the veteran Los Angeles sprinter may be barred from representing the United States in the Olympic games at Amsterdam.

Paddock qualified for his third Olympic team when he finished in the 200 meter final at Cambridge, Mass., Saturday, but his amateur status was challenged both by the A. A. U. track and field committee and the American Olympic selection committee.

The Southern Pacific association of the A. A. U. cleared Paddock of similar charges which grew from complaints about his motion picture work and personal appearances.

Meanwhile, Paddock will again be taken abroad with the United States Olympic team, awaiting what decision the A. A. U. will make of his case. If Paddock is cleared, he will be approved for competition at Amsterdam, but if he is disqualified, Roland Locke of Nebraska will take his place. If the decision is reached by the A. A. U. before Wednesday and is adverse to Paddock, Locke and not Paddock will sail with the team. If not decided by Wednesday, both Locke and Paddock will go abroad, awaiting the final decision.

Daniel J. Ferris, secretary of the A. A. U., said today that Paddock would be asked to show that the charges in regard to his motion picture contracts and appearances at vaudeville theaters were not for personal remuneration.

Major General McArthur, chairman of the registration committee, has taken a definite stand. No man whose amateur status is not definitely established will be allowed to represent the United States.

CHICAGO, July 9.—Dave Shade, California, and Bert Coggins, Mexican, middleweight, will meet in a ten round bout here tonight. The winner of the fight may be matched with Mickey Walker for the championship.

SPORTSMATTER

BY FRANK GETTY

The loud and raucous cry of "Boo!" has been raised so frequently by disgruntled fight fans of late that one would imagine the judges and referees were willfully ignorant of their business in designating winners.

Some of the yelling is being done by disgruntled betterers who backed the wrong boxer but some of it comes from well-meaning but usually misguided fans who have not been able to see eye to eye with the officials.

The business of judging a fight and naming the winner is not an easy one. There have been bad decisions rendered by ordinarily capable officials this spring. Usually, however, the officials have been right, and the fans, viewing the affair from some distance, have been wrong.

The squawk which went up through the rain in Comiskey Park last month after Mickey Walker had successfully defended his middleweight title against Ace Hudkins of Nebraska, was most uncalled for. Walker won that fight as surely as he ever won one in his life.

Fought a Bad Fight. "The worst Hudkins should have had was a draw," protested his backers, who seemed to be legion.

As a matter of fact, the best Hudkins should have had was to be tossed out of the ring for foul fighting. The Nebraska made a bad fight of it from start to finish, and while Walker did not distinguish himself by popping over the Ace, the champion was never behind.

Much the same thing occurred when Tommy Loughran defended the light heavyweight championship against Armand Emanuel of California.

Racial prejudices rang through the howls which went up from the Hebrews when Loughran, quite properly, was named winner. Tommy had battered Emanuel badly about the body and was unhurt himself. The champion was missing badly, and did not look like his old self, but he did whip Armand decisively.

"Boo!" screamed the fans who wanted to see the Jewish boy declared victor.

Risko Was Surprised. The Risiko-Godfrey fight provided rather a different example of difference of opinion. In that fight, the chubby Cleveland boy was as surprised as anyone else when the announced raised his soggy glove at the finish. Godfrey turned several shades paler than caramel custard when he heard the verdict. Many believe the gigantic negro could have whipped Risiko handily had he been so inclined. At it was, Godfrey forfeited any right to consideration by his customary dilatory tactics.

Fights appear vastly different when one is the third man in the ring, or is perched upon a high stool at the resin's edge, from what they do a dozen rows from the ring. At a distance, the fighter who is going forward, swinging, leading, slapping, diving into his opponent, always looks better than the clever defensive fighter who blocks his man's blows and counters effectively.

Only time old Mike McGigue used to win a fight the crowd would shriek in protest. It took Mike ten years to educate the fans to an appreciation of his skill.

From a distance, it is impossible to see whether a blow lands cleanly or is partly or wholly blocked. The force of the blows does not register with the fan who is half a block away, from the ring.

ABERNETHY FAILS IN OLYMPIC TRIALS

JOHN ABERNETHY, famous Ohio, ville high jumper, missed a chance to represent the United States in the Olympic team by ten inches in his trials today.

Abernethy and another star at Cincinnati, and captain of his college track team there, went out of the jump at six foot, three inches. A margin over six feet, five inches won the jump.

82 MEN SELECTED FOR OLYMPIC TEAM

NEW YORK, July 9.—Eighty-two men were selected for the 1928 United States Olympic track and field team, as announced by the Olympic selection committee.

Four members of the team have been selected for their third straight time, including Jackson V. Scholz, sprinter; Joie Ray, who has changed from the 5,000 metres to the 10,000 metres and marathon; Ray Watson, who is running the 800 metres instead of the 1500 metres, and Charley Paddock, sprinter, whose amateur status is under investigation.

Only two men, Ray and John L. Romic, of Philadelphia, were named for the 10,000 metres. Four men were selected for every other event except the 1,500 metres were Lloyd Hahn was named in place of Alva Martin of Purdue as fourth man. Hahn made the team as winner of the Fellows and Masonic fraternities.

Baseball

YESTERDAY'S HERO: Callahan, Cincinnati outfielder, who tripled with the bases filled in the ninth inning to give the Reds a 6-5 victory over Philadelphia.

Although Babe Ruth got his 30-home run in the second game it didn't help much and the Browns won a double victory, 10-4 and 5-2. It was the second time this year that the Yankees had been beaten in a twin bill.

The St. Louis Cardinals took a third and a half lead on first place in the National when good pitching and heavy hitting gave them both ends of a double header from the Braves 7-4 and 12-8.

BUCKEYE SHOWS STEADY GROWTH IN STATEMENT

Continued, steady growth is shown in the financial statement just issued by The Buckeye State Building and Loan company, 36 E. Gay-st, Columbus, Ohio.

Growth in resources was almost $5,000,000 during the past six months, and over ten thousand customers were added since January 1, making in all 87,000 people now served by this financial institution.

On January 1, The Buckeye voluntarily reduced its loaning rate in Columbus and vicinity from 6 1-2 to 6 per cent, which enabled it to retain its prime securities. It now has 11,600 loans totaling over $41,000,000, all secured by first mortgages on real estate—Homes, doubles, duplexes, and apartments, of an appraised value of over $120,000,000.

President L. P. McCullough stated that money was plentiful during the past six months, but his company was enabled to employ all funds on its usual basis of security, prime first mortgages on homes.

He said the business would continue to be conducted along the same safe and conservative policies as in the past, the company carrying at its expense every

Joseph W. Adkins

Joseph W. Adkins in announcing his candidacy for the office of Judge of the Court of Common Pleas does hereby wish to make to the men and women of Pickaway County, the following brief statements:

He is a native of Pickaway County and completed his law course at the Ohio Northern University in 1898, and was admitted to the bar the same year. Since that time he continuously practiced law in Circleville until he was elected to the office of Probate Judge.

Many requested him to place his name before the voters for re-election as Judge of the Probate Court but owing to the fact that the policy of the Democratic Party is strongly against "Third Terms" for the same office, he declined.

As to his Judicial ability to fill the office of Common Pleas Judge, he prefers to leave that to the judgment of the people whom he has served, rather than to try to enumerate his own qualifications. He wishes to say, however, that during the last term as Probate Judge, this Court has had the most important litigation ever instituted in any Court of Pickaway County, namely: the litigation involving the construction of the Chesapeake & Hocking Railway and the widening of the Public Highways for road improvements. These suits were all promptly heard and disposed of. The verdict given against the Railroad Company in favor of the Mid-West Box Company was the largest money verdict and judgment ever given in any Court in this county.

He respectfully submits his candidacy for Judge of the Court of Common Pleas to the consideration of the men and women voters of this county.

He is a native of Pickaway County and completed his law course at the Ohio Northern University in 1898, and was admitted to the bar the same year. Since that time he continuously practiced law in Circleville until he was elected to the office of Probate Judge.

Many requested him to place his name before the voters for re-election as Judge of the Probate Court but owing to the fact that the policy of the Democratic Party is strongly against "Third Terms" for the same office, he declined.

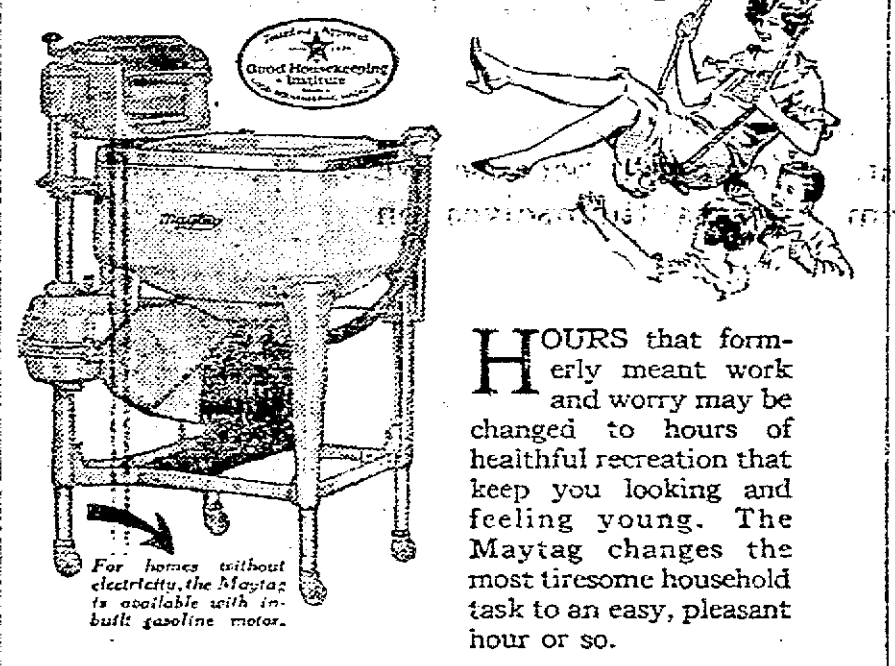

As to his judicial ability to fill the office of Common Pleas Judge, he prefers to leave that to the judgment of the people whom he has served, rather than to try to enumerate his own qualifications. He wishes to say, however, that during the last term as Probate Judge, this Court has had the most important litigation ever instituted in any Court of Pickaway County, namely: the litigation involving the construction of the Chesapeake & Hocking Railway and the widening of the Public Highways for road improvements. These suits were all promptly heard and disposed of. The verdict given against the Railroad Company in favor of the Mid-West Box Company was the largest money verdict and judgment ever given in any Court in this county.

He respectfully submits his candidacy for Judge of the Court of Common Pleas to the consideration of the men and women voters of this county.

Hosiery Sales on the Increase

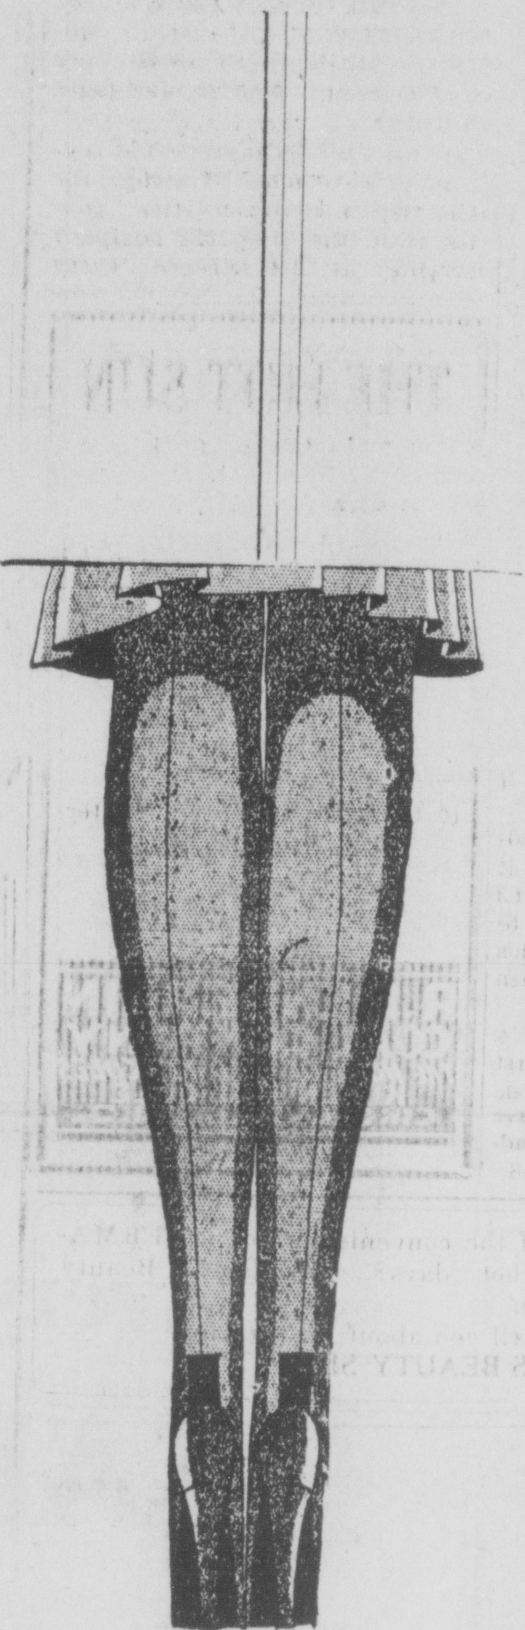

The increase in hosiery sales in the past three of four years has been phenomenal.

The brevity of feminine apparel—we're casting no reflections, whatever!—has made hosiery a most important part of milady's costume.

It is not our purpose to discuss styles, however. The phase of the hosiery question which we have particularly noted is the fact that our local merchants here in Circleville have stocked the very best lines known—nationally advertised lines that have reputations to sustain.

The purchase of unknown brands of hosiery from strangers who call at your home is not safe. Such salesmen usually are here today and gone tomorrow. Adjustments are not in their plan of business.

Local merchants stand back of their representations. If their lines of hosiery do not give complete satisfaction they want to know it. We know, because we have heard them express themselves on the subject.

A THRILL IN THE NEWS

If our time were not so completely taken up just now with political maneuvers arising from the two party conventions, we surely would have appreciated the story of the Arctic plight of Captain Noble and his men for what it really is—one of the most gripping, absorbing stories of the past year.

For real drama nothing has happened in a long time to equal this northland tale. A group of men sets forth to conquer the ancient fastness in a great silver dirigible. They fly to the pole and start to return. Buffeted by storms, they are driven far off their course. The world loses communication with them and gives them up for lost.

And then, suddenly, radio keys began to click. The lost men were alive—alive and on the ground, marooned on desolate ice fields far to the north. Their dirigible was wrecked; they were trying to get ashore but were being baffled by diwening lanes of open water. They asked for help.

Then began the attempts at rescue. Airplanes soared over the ice and passed close to the wanderers, failing to see them altho seen by them. And all the time came the message from the stranded explorers— messages that grew ever fainter as the radio batters grew weaker.

It is a long time since the newspapers have had anything more truly thrilling and interesting than this. There is something about an attempt to rescue anyone who is in dire danger that never fails to grip the human heart. When an ignorant Kentucky hill billy got trapped in a cave far underground the nation watched breathless, for many days while men struggled to reach him. When the submarine S-4 sank the pitiful undersea tragedy held the attention of everyone while the divers worked frantically to the tune of the faint hammer taps on the steel hull.

We cannot read about such things unmoved. Inevitably, our hearts go out to the victims, and we pray that the rescuers may succeed.

The inward necessity that makes us feel that way is a good sign. It proves that men are not quite as widely separated by misunderstanding and prejudice as we sometimes think. There are common grounds on which all of us may meet. Extreme danger is one of them. Perhaps the old theory that different races, classes and nations must always be antagonistic is mistaken.

It is. We are making progress. At present we have advanced only a little way; we have to see a stranger in dire peril before we can open our hearts to him. But at least we can do it. And as the years pass and men grow wiser and more civilized understanding will come more easily. Then people will begin to see what the word "brotherhood" means.

BRONCHOS AND LOLLIPOPS

Verily, the hard-boiled glories of the western frontier are passing. The Department of Commerce the other day issued a set of figures dealing with the consumption of candy in the United States. It had everything tabulated by states; and what state do you suppose led in the per capita consumption of chocolate bars, gum drops and the other dainties of the sugar shop?

Why, Nevada, to be sure! Nevada, where the burning sun beats down on thousands of miles of parched desert; Nevada, where in the hellroaring mining camps of old, whisky was rated a drink for babies, and bullet wounds were considered minor affairs like mosquito bites; Nevada, where the hardy prospectors wore bear skins for underwear and whipped their horses with rattlesnakes.

And the second state in per capita consumption of candy was Montana, possessor of a similar past.

The frontier, gentlemen, has been tamed.

SUCCESS

Success is easy.
Have you found Around your Home
It will abound.
Yes, right inside
Your garden wall
If only you
Will heed its call;
Success.
The way I see it,
Lies
In the clear blue
Of morning skies,
In that gay sun
That brightly shines
Or it may be
In tops of pines
That spread their heads
Up from the Sod
As though they're Reaching
Out for God;
And here it is
In some good friend
Who's vowed he'll Help you
To the end;
I've found it in A whippoorwill
Whose morning song
Has added thrill
To some drab
Day when I have Thought
Success must after all
Be bought—Success? Perhaps
It's in a rose
That at my bedroom Window
Grows—

And what we mean to say Is,
Success is not in Hording wealth
Up in some vault
Just for yourself,
Success must be
In days that please
And life that really Brings surcease;
In knowledge that You've lived
Your best—
And Fate will take Care of the Rest.

tization of this novel.

SYNOPSIS

Rose Shannon, beautiful cabaret dancer, becomes innocently involved in the mysterious theft of $200,000 from the Mercer National Bank.
The Professor, leader of a gang of crooks, believing that she knows where the money is, corners her in a lonely cottage. She is saved by Chuck White, a member of the gang with whom she is in love. Escaping to the station, she overhears the gang plotting to kill Chuck for double-crossing them. She sets out to warn him, but collapses and is taken to the hospital. The police, learning of her whereabouts, are hot-foot on her trail.

CHAPTER XIX—Continued

He withdrew into his shell again and seemingly remained in a coma until the cab drew up before the hospital door. Both men got out, paid their fare, and entered, inquiring for the girl who had been brought in that morning. A white coated interne showed them up to the long ward where two rows of white beds allowed a passageway down the center of the room. The interne halted before one of the cots.

"That's the girl you're looking for," he informed the officers.

"Was you on duty when she was brought in?" Cowles asked the youthful doctor.

"Yes, I was here," he informed them. "You're from Central Sta-

"How soon do you think this girl will be able to leave?"

Don? He looked at the two men questioningly.

The detectives turned back their coat lapels, revealing the badges on their vests.

"She came in about four this morning," the doctor continued, after surveying the shiny emblems.
"It's just a case of hysteria, brought on by some shock and ex-posure. Some farmer dropped her here. He said that he had found her on the roadside on his way in to market."

Cowles nodded his head and walked around the side of the bed and looked down at the girl. She was tossing fitfully from side to side, mumbling now and then incoherently. Her face was a pale, deathly white and even in her enforced sleep, shadows of pain and fright flitted across the delicate features, causing her mouth to twist into pitiful, thin lines.

"We got her quieted down," the doctor began. "She came to while we were bringing her in, and began raving something about a professor and some money. She's evidently had a pretty bad scare. She kept calling for some one by the name of Chuck. I couldn't make out very much else."

Cowles nodded and bent his head to try to catch some of the muttered words that Rose kept repeating. She was flinging her arms about restlessly. Her eyelids fluttered; her lips trembled; her words were short, staccato, rambling, quite unrelated to each other.

"Chuck, Chuck," she was gasping. "..... love you....."
Suddenly she sat up. "No, no, you mustn't, you mustn't!
going..... kill Chuck....." she cried. "Antique shop.....professor.....let me go! Let me go!" Her words sounded strange and somewhat like a speech from an old-fashioned melodrama to the young doctor, but to Simpson and Cowles they held portentous meaning.

"Looks as though she's got an idea they're after Chuck White," Cowles leaned close to Simpson and spoke low in the other's ear.
"She's evidently pretty well mixed up with this gang."

"Say, I wonder if the gang's back at the fence," Cowles questioned Simpson.

"We could go down and have a look," he suggested.

"And let this girl get out of our sight again—not much," Cowles pooch-pooched the idea vigorously.

"Well, she can't get outta here," he said.

"Say, that's an idea!" He turned to the doctor, speaking quickly.
"How soon do you think this girl will be able to leave," he questioned eagerly.

"Oh, she's coming to, all right," the interne answered. "She ought to be able to leave this afternoon; as soon as she's awake she'll probably be all right. We don't keep them any longer than we have to.
She hasn't any clothes, that's the only thing."

"What about your Social Service Department?" Cowles asked.

"Oh, they'll dig up something for her to wear. We can't send her out the way she came in."

"Well, look here," Cowles began, his face lighting up with sudden inspiration. "Now you keep this jane here until we get back. If we're not back before you go, you warn the next doctor coming on, and don't allow this girl out of your sight. She may be wanted in that Mercer Bank robbery."

"Phew!" the young man whistled "Bobbied halred bandit, eh? Is she the girl that was caught with that fake satchel?"

"Yep," Cowles nodded importantly. "We're working on the case and we've got it about cleared up. That's why we can't afford to let this girl slip through our fingers. She know a lot about it."

"I see," the interne answered. "All right, I'll take care of her for you.
Hope everything works out all right.
Sorry for the poor kid, though. She doesn't look like that sort."

The three men turned to go, the interne leading the way.

As the detectives went down the steps Simpson looked at his companion. "Say," he began, "what'd you spill all the beans for?"

"Well, I want to get down around the Professor's place there and see what's going on. I'll bet hell's poppin'. Besides, if you take a person into your confidence you got 'em workin' with you, and we can't afford to let anything happen to that Shannon girl now or we're due for a fall."

"I guess you're right at that," Simpson agreed, "all except I still don't think we're on the right track."

"Well, for Gawd's sake!" Cowles stopped dead in his tracks and glared at the detective.

"Well, I still think it was an inside job of some kind."

"Yeh, I supposed you want to go tailin' that cashier and the teller again," Cowles sneered. "That goes in swell with the chief, don't it? All I've heard from you is that you been a lot of hooey about an inside job and you haven't dropped anything out right yet."

"Oh, I doano," Simpson chewed wearily on his cigar.

"Well, I'll tell you right now, we're going to keep a sharp look out on this girl and that damned fence down there, and once we get our fingers on Chuck White, we're going to squeeze the truth out of the whole bunch of them, or my name's mud."

"All right, all right," Simpson placated his fellow worker. "Mebbe you're right. Come on."

They hailed a cab once more and directed the driver to Hemlinway's antique shop. As they neared the corner of the street where the antique shop was situated Cowles leaned forward and spoke to the driver sharply. He had just seen a passing figure that struck him somehow as being familiar. The cab swerved to a standstill. Cowles grabbed Simpson's arm.

"Look there!" He pointed to a man whose back was towards them but who was very evidently making for the same destination that they were. "Who's that?"

Simpson frowned. "Gosh, I see that back some place before." He started to leap from the cab. "That's funny. I know who that is and I can't place him to save my neck."

But he had no more alighted on the sidewalk when the man turned hurriedly into the Professor's shop and disappeared from sight.

Cowles jumped out, and paid the fare. "Well, that's a queer one," he muttered. "Say, you know all the gang's round here. Get a wiggle on who 'ell was that?"

"That wasn't none of the gorillas
'round here," Simpson frowned.
"Lemme think a while, mebbe I'll place him. We could go in after him," he suggested hopefully.

"And let him get out the back way? Nothing doing! We're going to park right here and wait 'til he comes out. If I have to set here all day, I'm going to set. And don't get across the street, either. They'll be watchin' for us from that window, I'll bet anything. We'll lay right here—for a while, anyhow."

There is something about an attempt to rescue anyone who is in dire danger that never fails to grip the human heart. When an ignorant Kentucky hill billy got trapped in a cave far underground, the nation watched breathless. For many days while men struggled to reach him. When the submarine S-5 sank the pitiful undersized body held the attention of everyone while the divers worked frantically to the tune of the faint hammer-taps on the steel hull.

We cannot read about such things unmoved. Inevitably, our hearts go out to the victims, and we pray that the rescuers may succeed.

The inward necessity that makes us feel that way is a good sign. It proves that men are not quite as widely separated by misunderstanding and prejudice as we sometimes think. There are common grounds on which all of us may meet. Extreme danger is one of them. Perhaps the old theory that different races, classes and nations must always be antagonistic is mistaken.

It is. We are making progress. At present we have advanced only a little way; we have to see a stranger in dire peril before we can open our hearts to him. But at least we can do it. And as the years pass and men grow wiser and more civilized understanding will come more easily. Then people will begin to see what the word "brotherhood" means.

Verily, the hard-boiled glories of the western frontier are passing. The Department of Commerce the other day issued a set of figures dealing with the consumption of candy in the United States. It had everything tabulated by states; and what state do you suppose led in the per capita consumption of chocolate bars, gum drops and the other dainties of the sugar shop?

Why, Nevada, to be sure! Nevada, where the burning sun beats down on thousands of miles of parched desert; Nevada, where in the hellroaring mining camps of old, whisky was rated a drink for babies, and bullet wounds were considered minor affairs like mosquito bites; Nevada, where the hardy prospectors wore bear skins for underwear and whipped their horses with rattlesnakes.

And the second state in per capita consumption of candy was Montana, possessor of a similar past.

The frontier gentlemen, has been tamed.

SUCCESS
Success is easy. Have you found Around your Home It will abound. Yes, right inside Your garden wall If only you Will heed its call; Success, The way I see it, Lies In the clear blue Of morning skies. In that gay sun That brightly shines Or it may be In tops of pines That spread their heads Up from the Sod As though they're Reaching, Out for God; And here it is In some good friend Who's vowed he'll Help you To the end; I've found it in A whippoorwill Whose morning song Has added thrill To some drab Day when I have Thought Success must after all Be bought— Success? Perhaps It's in a rose That at my bedroom Window Grows—

And what we mean to say Is, Success is not in Harding wealth Up in some vault Just for yourself, Success must be In days that please And life that really Brings success; In knowledge that You've lived Your best— And Fate will take Care of the Rest.

the responsibility lies in the last analysis on the motorist. Every man who drives a car should always have sense enough to dim his lights when another car approaches. If he fails to he may have to go through the rest of his life bearing the knowledge that he has been the cause of a death or two.

And such knowledge could hardly be comfortable, even for the dumbbell who refuses to dim his lights.

"TENDERLOIN," starring Dolores Costello, is a Warner Bros. picture of this novel.

SYNOPSIS
Rose Shannon, beautiful cabaret dancer, becomes innocently involved in the mysterious theft of $200,000 from the Mercer National Bank. The Professor, leader of a gang of crooks, believing that she knows where the money is, corners her in a lonely cottage. She is saved by Chuck White, a member of the gang with whom she is in love. Escaping to the station, she overhears the gang plotting to kill Chuck for double-crossing them. She sets out to warn him, but collapses and is taken to the hospital. The police, learning of her whereabouts, are hot-foot on her trail.

He withdrew into his shell again and seemingly remained in a coma until the cab drew up before the hospital door. Both men got out, paid their fare, and entered, inquiring for the girl who had been brought in that morning. A white coated nurse showed them up to the long ward where two rows of white beds allowed a passageway down the center of the room. The nurse halted before one of the cots.

"That's the girl you're looking for," he informed the officers. "Was you on duty when she was brought in?" Cowles asked the youthful doctor. "Yes, I was here," he informed them. "You're from Central Station?"

"What about your Social Service Department?" Cowles asked. "Oh, they'll dig up something for her to wear. We can't send her out the way she came in."

"Well, look here," Cowles began, his face lighting up with sudden inspiration. "Now you keep this janz here until we get back. If we're not back before you go, you warn the next doctor coming or, and don't allow this girl out of your sight. She may be wanted in that Mercer Bank robbery."

"Phew!" the young man whistled. "Bobbied haired landit, eh? Is she the girl that was caught with that fake satchel?" "Yep," Cowles nodded important ly. "We're working on the case and we've got it about cleared up. That's why we can't afford to let this girl slip through our fingers. She knows a lot about it."

"I see," the nurse answered. "All right, I'll take care of her for you. Hope everything works out all right. Sorry for the poor kid, though. She doesn't look like that sort."

The three men turned to go, the nurse leading the way. As the detectives went down the steps Simpson looked at his companion. "Say," he began, "what'd you spill all the beans for?" "Well, I want to get down around the Professor's place there and see what's going on. I'll bet hell's pop pin'. Besides, if you take a person into your confidence you got 'em workin' with you, and we can't afford to let anything happen to that Shannon girl now or we're due for a fall."

"I guess you're right at that," Simpson agreed. "All except I still don't think we're on the right track." "Well, for Gawd's sake!" Cowles stopped dead in his tracks and glared at the detective. "Well, I still think it was an inside job of some kind."

"Yes, I suppose you want to go failin' that cashier and the teller again," Cowles sneered. "That goes for me, too. I'll bet hell's pop pin'. All I've heard from you has been a lot of honey about an inside job and you haven't hoped anything out right yet."

"Oh, I dunno," Simpson answered wearily on his side. "Well, I'll talk you right now, we're going to keep a sharp look out on this girl and that damned fence down there, and once we get our fingers on Chuck White, we're going to squeeze the truth out of the whole bunch of them, or my name's mud."

They halted a cab once more and directed the driver to Hemlaw's antique shop. As they neared the corner of the street where the antique shop was situated Cowles leaned forward and spoke to the driver sharply. He had just seen a passing figure that struck him somehow as being familiar. The cab swerved to a standstill. Cowles grabbed Simpson's arm.

"Look there!" He pointed to a man whose back was towards them but who was very evidently making for the same destination that they were. "Who's that?" Simpson frowned. "Gosh, I see that but some place before." He started to leap from the cab. "That's funny. I know who that is and I can't place him to save my neck." But he had no more alighted or the sidewalk when the man turned hurriedly into the Professor's shop and disappeared from sight.

Cowles jumped out, and paid the fare. "Well, that's a queer one," he muttered. "Say, you know all the gang's round here. Get a wiggie on who he hell was that?" "That wasn't none of the gorilla round here," Simpson frowned. "Lemme think a while, mebbe I'll place him. We could go in after him," he suggested hopefully. "And let him get out the back way? Nothing doing! We're going to park right here and wait 'til he comes out. If I have to set here all day, I'm going to set. And don't get across the street, either. They'll be watchin' for us from that window, I'll bet anything. Well lay right here—for a while, anyhow."

SUIT FOR DIVORCE
Bertha A. Turner has filed a suit for divorce in common pleas court from her husband, Oscar C. Turner, thru her attorney, Thomas A. Renick. The couple were married April 17, 1905, and are the parents of a son and daughter, and also an adopted daughter.

She charges her husband with extreme cruelty and gross neglect. The petitioner says that her husband is the owner of a car, some real estate and has a deposit of money in the Third National bank of this city. She asks the court for a restraining order against his disposing of any of his property, his car or the money he has on deposit in the bank. A temporary restraining order was allowed.

SOCIAL FUNCTION FOR MISS HOLMAN

A very smart social function of the month was the bridge tea given for Miss Mary Holman at which Miss Elizabeth Dunlap was hostess Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock at her home on W. Franklin-st. Miss Margaret Weldon, Miss Elizabeth Roth and Miss Ruth Holman assisted her in the dining room where a decorative color scheme of yellow and white was used in the flowers, and in the candles which were tied with white tulle. The mints and ice were also of these two colors.

In the other rooms were massed sweet peas in variegated colors interspersed with baby breath, in large colored bowls.

There were 25 guests seated at the tables for the progressive bridge, and after the fifth round, prizes for the two highest scores were presented to Alice Ada May and Mrs. Howard Orr and a guest prize to Miss Mary Holman, the guest of honor. She has recently returned from Europe, and left Sunday for Washington, D. C.

DISCOVERY OF NORTH POLE

The North Pole, after standing a siege of over four centuries, was at last conquered by man. Two men, Admiral Peary and Dr. Cook laid claims to the discovery. Cook maintained that he discovered the Pole in 1908, a year earlier than Peary, but the latter is generally given the credit because of the statistics and markings on his instruments.

Care and consideration in the selection of details permit arrangements in perfect taste yet within the means of the most humble purse.

SOCIETY

SOCIAL FUNCTION FOR MISS HOLMAN

A very smart social function of the month was the bridge tea given for Miss Mary Holman at which Miss Elizabeth Dunlap was hostess Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock at her home on W. Franklin-st. Miss Margaret Weldon, Miss Elizabeth Roth and Miss Ruth Holman assisted her in the dining room where a decorative color scheme of yellow and white was used in the flowers, and in the candles which were tied with white tulle. The mints and ice were also of these two colors.

In the other rooms were massed sweet peas in variegated colors interspersed with baby breath, in large colored bowls.

There were 28 guests seated at the tables for the progressive bridge, and after the fifth round, prizes for the two highest scores were presented to Alice Ada May and Mrs. Howard Orr and a guest prize to Miss Mary Holman, the guest of honor. She has recently returned from Europe, and left Sunday for Washington, D. C.
